ORGANIC MEETS FINE DINING

The axica Congress and Conference Centre is perhaps best known for its extraordinary design, the work of prize winning architect Frank Gehry. But those guests who have had the pleasure of enjoying an axica gala dinner menu within its hallowed walls know there is much more to this building than meets just the eye:

„Our challenge is to continually re-interpret the building's impressive design and translate it into creative dishes fitting of such an inspirational atmosphere“ says Chef de Cuisine Gorden Peter.

Taking inspiration from Frank Gehry's design approach of combining and juxtaposing interesting forms and materials in his buildings, Gorden strives to emulate this in his creation new dishes. Using wherever possible locally sourced ingredients the menus are a daring mix of traditional cooking with a contemporary edge. The emphasis however is always heavily placed on sourcing the best available ingredients by carefully selecting those suppliers who have recognised quality and ethical farming standards.

„ORGANIC INGREDIENTS AND FINE DINING „ do not have to be a contradiction in terms. Today's clients set the benchmark very high in terms of taste and visual presentation, two good reasons for taking advantage of locally grown organic produce with its incomparable freshness and aroma“ stresses Gorden.

This is a philosophy the axica is happy to adhere to beyond the boundaries of its own building. Over the last few years Gorden and his axica Catering Team have stamped their own definitive gastronomic fingerprint on a variety of events held at other unusual venues in the city.

Whether preparing a light snack for a conference or an elaborate gala dinner, the challenge for him and his team remains the same: "to exceed your expectations."
